He was admitted to the bar of New Jersey in 308, and very soon attained a prominent position as one of the leading lawyers of that State. Like most young men in the legal profession, he took great interest in the politics of the day, and soon became known as an ardent arty. Hurrah! hurrah! the country's 'risin' For Henry Clay and Frelinghuysen.

But their efforts failed them. Polk and Dallas, the democratic candidates, were elected and inaugurated, ahough the contest was very close, and Mr. Frelinghuysen actually responded in a speech to the congratulations of a large number of his feliow citizens, who visited his residence on the evening subsequent to the election. He shapt at least one night under the firm conviction that he was to be Vice President of the United States for four years after the 4th day of March, 1846.

Mr. For ingluyson resigned the chancellorship of the New York University in 1850, on his election to the Presidency of Ruigers College of New Brunswick, New Jersoy, and removed from New York to that city during the same year. He resided in New Brunswick at the time of his death, and there, as everywhere else, he gained—shorichly deserved—the esteem of his neighbors and fellow ditizens.

his death, and there, as everywhere else, he gained—as he richly deserved—the esteem of his neighbors and fellow citizens.

Mr. Frelinghuysen was a man of urbane disposition kind and gonial in all his communications with his fellow men, steadfastly apright and moral in his deportment, and of vory strong convictions both in religion and politics. He was a pleasing speaker, commanding the respect even of his most determined political opponents. His personal qualifications may be summed up in the words used by Daniel Webster, in a speech made in Baltimore, after the nomination of Mr. F. had been announced. We copy from a report of Mr. Webster's speech on that occasion, as it a peared in the Herath, on May 5, 1844. Mr. Webster said:—

"With regard to the second great office in this country it is only necessary to say that, from among several gentlemen—all of them my friends—and to scarcely one of them could a preference be given as respects their integrity and their talents—from among them a selection has been made, than which a wiser and a better could not have been made. There is not a man of purer character, of more sober temperament, of more accessible manners, and of more frm, unbending, uncompromising whig principles than Theodore Freinghuysen; and not only is he all the, but such is the case of his manners, such the spotiess purity of his life, such the sterling attributes of his character, that he has the regard, the fervent attachment and the enduring love of all who know him."

Mr. Frelinghuysen's political predilections naturally attached him to the republican party. On the breaking out of the rebellion he used his endeavors to arouse the patriotism of his fellow-citizens in defence of the Union and the constitution against the assaults of those who are yet endeavoring to reuse the American nation a thing of the past, in order to build upon its rums a despotism more likely to gratify their seifsh schemes and their unholy and traitorous desires.

THE DAY OF THANKSGIVING.

sponse yesterday. In most of our city churches the day was set apart, by appropriate services, for thanksgiving and hymns of gratitude were chaunted to the Almighty arms, on sea and land, engaged in suppressing the rebel-lion. It is doubly pleasing to learn also that, responsive and other hardships while struggling for the good of the country. Quite handsome sums were contributed in some of the churches, and preparations are also being Yesterday being the anniversary of the entrance of our aviour into Jerusalem, the usual ceremony of blessing and distributing palm to the congregation was observed in all the Catholic churches in the city. At St. Patrick's at the commencement of which the reverend gentleman reminded the congregation that the President had recommended the congregation that the President had recommended the people of the United States on that day to offer thanks to God for the recent victories He wouch safed to our forces, as also to implore His blessing upon those brought into affliction by sedition and civil war; and concluded his remarks by calling upon them to effer up fervent prayers to the Almighty, beseeching him to crown our arms with success, and put us in the possession of peace and national happiness.

TRINITY CHURCH. The usual morning services at Trinity church yester day were attended by an immense congregation, drawn together with the double object of commemorating Palm Sunday and of responding to the Precident's recomup for the recent signal victories of our forces over the rebellion. The services were those prescribed by the Episcopal church for Palm Sunday, and Rev. Dr. Ogilbee, assisted by other chergymen, robed in their sacerdotal vestimants, officiated. Towards the close of the service Dr. Ogilbee ascended the pulpit, and dolivered a short but touching sermon on the subjects suggested by the day. He took his text from the 63d peain, chapter 31, in which occurs the words:—"Because thou hast been my help, therefore under the shadow of thy wing will I repose." This passage, he said, was peculiarly appropriate to the day, for in our unhappy domestic struggies the Lord had been our help, and had guided the right to success and victory. It so happened that on this 13th day of April is calebrated the triumphal entry of Christ into Jerusalem—which was only the beginning of the sorrowful road to Calvary; and we likewise celebrated an event which caused an uprising of the American people in their might and majesty to vindicate the outraged honor of the nation. Once year ago exactly our country's flag had been stricken down from Fort Sumer; but that act stirred the patriotic heart of the nation, and thousands hurried to the rescue from every portion of the country. The solemn tramp of armed legions was heard on every side, and from a quiet and peaceful people we suddenly became are an auton of solders. In the long interval since that time the Lord had been our help, for though we had suffered severe trials, His arm had plainly been stretched forth in our behalf and would finally direct us to that most desirable or all ends—an honorable and speedy peace. Some storms we must expect, he said, but he believed a Power that man could not control was swritly bearing us onward to a day of joy, because of peace. It was in no boasting spirit he said this, for the other joy he felt was in the consciouses that every fresh victory brings us nearer the destruction of secession the restort's process.

The collection as they noeded. He concluded up for the recent signal victories of our forces over the

The national thanksgiving for the success of the Union Br. Cheever, after an appropriate prayer, preached a very stirring sermon to a large/congregation. The following is a synepsis of the discourse:—He tookphistext from Isaian 16: 4 and 5:—"The extortioner is fat 'an end, the spoiler ceaseth, the oppressors are consumed out of the land. And in mercy shall the throne be established in troth, judgment and righteousness." The preacher commenced by observing that the great cause of gratitude was that there was the beginning of a fulfament of this tent in our land, through God's divine mercy, in this rebellion and war. It was a revolution on God's part, in behalf of the ensiaved, and for the deliverance of our own people and government from the dominion of slavery. It looked as though God would conduct us to freedom in spite of ourselves; in spite of churches, ministers, legislators, conservative of slavery, and refusing to make emmeripation any object of the war, God would accomplish emancipation by the war. We could not kelp ourselves; we might as well fight against God as against abolition; it was decreed, and it would come; and even while our generals—some of them—were still degrading themselves and their forces to the base and brutal work of hunting up slaves and remaining them to slavery. God was divine, the webste against God as against abolition; it was decreed, and it would come; and even while our generals—some of them—were still degrading themselves and their forces to the base and brutal work of hunting up slaves and returning them to slavery, God was driving the whole army, however unwillingly, right against the slaveholders, and would still do it, and in spite of all intrigues and attempts at the reconstruction of the Union and slavery, we might hope that God would compel us to cast out the demon utterly from the new Union, and to govern the whole United States by the law of freedom only. Dr. Cheever said that military glory was a very vulgar thing in comparison with moral glory, and that we, as a nation, had now the opportunity before us of true moral grandeur as no other nation ever had. The true glory of a nation is in its righteousness, its justice, its moral integrity, the uprightness and intelligence of the people; the love of freedom, not for ourselves only, but for all, respect for others' rights, freedom for the rebukes of God's Word against oppression, slavery, and all sin. Our true glory was to be found in any warlike superiority; but in the possession and extension of the blessings of freedom and Christianity, the glory of a practicel exemplification of benevolence and justice in governments, and liberty in subjects, the glory of a rivalry in the meat perfect assurance, and bestowment upon all classes of the rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Dr. Cheever condemned the assertion of the principle, especially from Christian ministers, that our only duty was to fight, fight, and leave the moral purpose and object foremost, and to make institute to the oppressed the object of the war. He said that, on the contrary, our duty was to bring out the consequences; and for would not give to others the irredom for which we are willing to fight ourselves, we should soon be carried headiong to roin. He chen showed the dreadful devastations of war, and the diangers of restering the war apirit, and t time ago the national flag. The rebe. had attacked those military posts, and turned agains, the country which had given them maintonance. We were egaged in conquering our own forts, retaking our own ships. What was it, then, which gave us the victory as national that we might keep an honorable position at the struggle? What but our faith? God had made usong those of the earth. The cause of universal liberty, was that this should be a civil war. Was it not the same kind of war that God had empowered as with our own nature? Let us not rejoice any the less, but rather the more, that our recent victories have been over our own countrymen. Such are the hardest victories of war—such the most important triumphs which the progress of civilization bring about. A civil war was a rebellion of the inhuman and barbarous ingredients in the body politic against the soul of the nation, against its spiritual destiny. He, the reverend preacher, rejoiced then with them that our Secretaries of the army and navy, together with the President, had taken a religious view of the victories, and called upon the church and the people to give thanks for the successes which had recently met our arms. They all knew, however, with what a melanoholy cost we had gained those victories. Thousands of wounded and dead men lay stiff in their blood, blazoning dreadful chapters in our history. Not a man, however, had given he life in vain. It was this which made life noble. Dead, they were not dead, for those young heroes in Tenessage ever live in God, will ever live in the hearts of their countrymen, and were now living above. They gave up life in have nacyly reinstated the nation in the forms prosperity. The day was ampletous for elebrating such victories that have nacyly reinstated the nation in its forms prosperity. The day was ampletous for elebrating such victories, in the reverse of twenty million toyal Americane acresupplicating Ged to accept their common gratifude for victories that have nacyly reinstated the nation in its forms prosperity.

and meaning of the special services of the day—the occasion being to return thanks to the Ruler of the Universe for the signal victories that have attended our national arms by land and sea. Every pew in the church was occupied, the galleries were filled, and sven the aliels were through the galleries were filled, and sven the aliels were through the galleries were filled, and sven the aliels were through the property of the choir, were admirably suited to the occasion.

The Rev. Dr. Adams then proceeded to read the recent proclamation of President Lincoln, suggesting to the pastors of the different churches throughout the Union the propriety of addressing a prayer of thanks to God for the success he has been pleased to grant our efforts and to implore His aid in the future duties of the nation. The reverend dector fully evinced his appreciation of the President's suggestion by the eloquent and truly patriotic prayer which he offered. He gave thanks to the source of all good for the protection he has always bestowed on this nation from the time of its birth to the present hour, and especially of lists, when the people have been called upon to pass through a terrible ordeal. He prayed that this Divine protection would always continue, and that the cause of right and justice would go on conquering and to conquer. He implored a continued bleasing on those to whom are entrusted the reins of government, as well as on the brave commanders of our sailers and soldiers—the delenders of our threatened liberties. He prayed that the day might soon arrive when the clash of arms shall cease within our berstein. No brief review can convey any idea of the effect of its delivery; but it may be said that these was not a soul there present who did not respond with heartfeit hamilly to the amen of that patriotic prayer.

In the sermon of the day the Rev. Dr. Adams also referred to the state of the nation, and took the occasion to make some reflections on the duty of the people. The text was selected from the Sid palm, beginning, "

The usual introductory devotional exercises having been performed, Mr. Beecher proceeded to deliver his sermon, choosing for his text the third werse of the thirteenth chapter of Hebrews:—Remember them that are in bonds, as bound with them; and they which suffer adversity, as being yoursolves also in the body."

After some introductory remarks in reference to self-isaness, he would, in order that they might be prepared to give assistance and thanksgiving of the right kind, take them through some scenes where they were bound as Christians to fulfil the command of the text. They should first remember those who were in trouble, as bound with them. Never since Columbus looked upon these shores had there been such a burdened year. It had been a year of battle, of blood, of breaking and reading, of crying and wretchedness—a year of beroism and suffering; of bitterness, jealousy, rage, wounding and of dying. The whole land is filled with agitation, and the continent has been jarred with the tramp of a million armed men. Prisons and hospitals were full, while dwellings were empty. Mr. Beecher went on to say that for a long period this nation had given itself up to material prosperity, and for the sake of such kind of presserty it had dallatested its we could would accomplish summorquish by the war we could not be give the price of the price of
